Research is complex theoretical investigation of criminal legal methods of influence on drug addicts, who committed the crimes. The concept of drug addict is fixed for the first time and complex characteristic of it is given, which must be taken into account by giving the sentence to such persons, by fixing the methods of their treatment, preventive measures of crimes, resocialization and rehabilitation. It is proved that forced treatment is a complex intersectoral institution, which consists of criminal legal, criminal executive, criminological, drug aspects. It is justified that «treatment», «improvement of mental condition» concerning the drug addicts, who committed the crimes and are serving the sentence, must be examined as a constituents of the purpose «reformation of convicted persons». Serving the sentence must foresee the complex application of medical opportunities for achievement the purpose of medical rehabilitation and also penitentiary methods for their reformation.
